LEGACY of Relief Society CELEBRATED in Chandler

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

Latter-day Saint women across Arizona revel in their membership in Relief Society, celebrating with the worldwide organization the 170th anniversary since the organization began. Founded in 1842 in Nauvoo, Illinois, it is an official auxiliary of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day and "one of the oldest and largest women's organizations in the world," with approximately 6 million members in over 170 countries and territories.

In April General Conference, Sister Julie B. Beck, who was released in the Saturday afternoon session as the Relief Society general president, stated the organization's purposes as taught by the Lord's prophets, saying, "From their counsel it is clear that the purposes of Relief Society are to increase faith and personal righteousness, strengthen families and homes and seek out and help those in need."

That legacy is evident across Arizona, as Relief Society sisters continue to magnify those purposes. In particular, one recent discovery points to the importance of the organization and the influence it's had over the years.

According to a history of Relief Society in Chandler, LDS women participated in Red Cross classes and then taught their neighbors. The caption reads: Red Cross Home Nursing Class, sponsored 1937-8, by the Relief Society, Lillian D. Murray, President. Seated, left to right; Emma M. Skousen, Stella Lowry, Mrs. Peterson, Thelma Stauss, Aleda V. Lindquist, ---, Marva V. Andersen. Standing, left to right: Ada H. Joiner, Sister Shupe, Stake R. S. Pres., Lillian D. Murray, R.S. Pres., Mina Laird, Faye M. McGaughey, Rita M. McGaughey, Ruth T. Lamoreaux, Juanita S. Ray, Mrs. A. T. Knox, Pauline M. Openshaw, Judge Maud Sparks.

Ellen Burley, Chandler Stake Relief Society president, explains, "I was put in my calling about a year and a half ago and found the most fabulous history book about Relief Society in Chandler."

The book chronicled the contributions of LDS women in that community, beginning in 1913, when Chandler only had a branch of the Church, and continuing through 1956.

"It was fascinating to read. It told about the first stake Relief Society president, about how many Visiting Teaching visits were made in October 1913, about how much money was collected for the dues they paid at that time, and about the wheat fund," Sister Burley says.

It also told about the war years and about Red Cross classes that Relief Society sisters took and then taught, and about the ways they reached out to servicemen at Williams Air Force Base.

"Most of all, it told about the sisters serving the sick and serving each other in so, so many ways," Sister Burley says. "Relief Society in general has given us such a foundation in service."

The discovery of that history ultimately led to a combined effort by the Chandler, Chandler East and Chandler West stakes to put together a community event in conjunction with the city's centennial celebration.

"To not celebrate what these sisters did would be sad for them, and for us," says Sister Burley.

Called, "Chandler Relief Society: A Century of Sisterhood and Service," the community-invited event will showcase the accomplishments of the Relief Society as well as honor several LDS women who have lived in Chandler for many years. A program and displays will explain what Relief Society is about and free copies of The Book of Mormon and the current Relief Society manual, "Daughters in My Kingdom" will be available.

Sister Burley says as they worked to put the event together, a second historical volume was discovered, this one giving an account of Relief Society in the area through the early 1980s. They also came across a 1943 Chandler Relief Society recipe book.

Both historical volumes and the recipe book are now available online at www.ChandlerRSCentennial.com.

Janette Bleazard, Stake Relief Society president for Chandler West Stake, says, "The real purpose [of the event] is to celebrate the accomplishments and contributions of Relief Society sisters in Chandler and to testify of the Lord's hand in the work that was done then and now."

She found it touching to read the history and to learn "what belonging to Relief Society cost them—what they gave. ... They were so involved in the community in so many ways."

Sister Bleazard adds that the event "is not just to entertain. We are saying, come, learn, see who we are and the work we do, and what we believe. It is to share the spirit of the work and of women then and today."

Gabriele Larson, who, as Chandler East Stake Relief Society president, also has been involved in the centennial event, says she has been reminded the legacy she is part of.

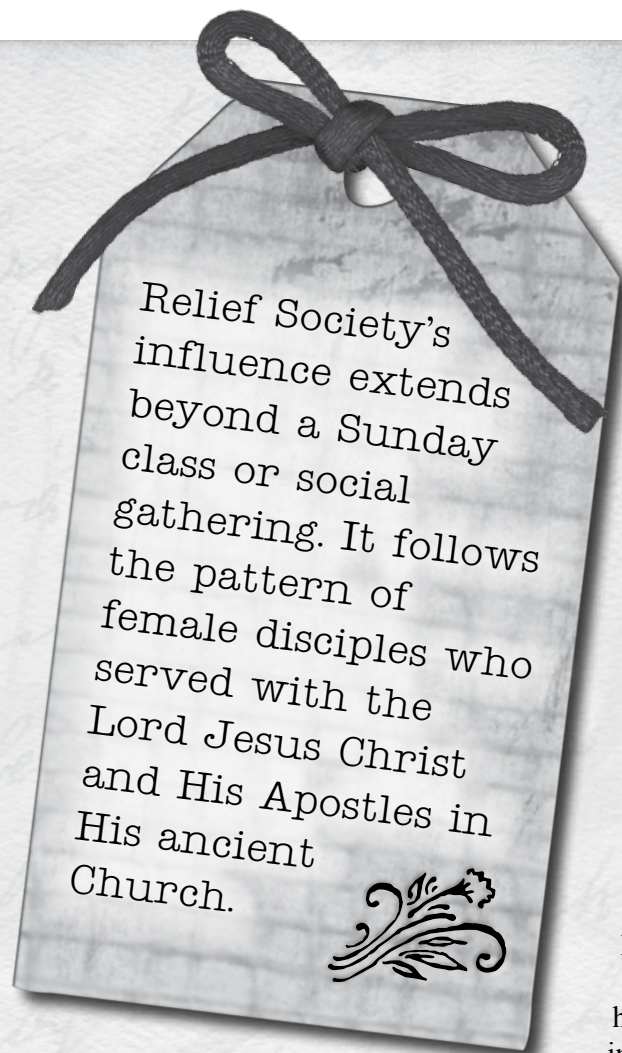

"I realized what a long line of strong women I come from," she says, adding that she has loved being part of that legacy since her college days.

"Relief Society has always helped me. I lived away from my own mom and sisters, but I had a group of moms and sisters I could rely on and get advice from. My Relief Society sisters taught me how to be a mom and a wife, how to cook, clean and can."

More importantly, Sister Larson says, "They taught me how to help others."

Sister Larson says she looks forward to welcoming her own daughter into Relief Society some day; and, until then, she hopes to continue to strengthen the Relief Society sisters in her stake.

She says, "I hope they know how loved they are by Heavenly Father. I hope they know how much work there is to do, and how important they are in that work."

Often, she says, sisters believe they are doing only small or simple things when, in reality, they are making huge contributions.

"Little acts of service turn into a lot. That's the way the Savior served, one-on-one, individually, in people's homes. That's the work of Relief Society," Sister Larson says. "Sisters are making such a difference in their homes, their families and in the community."

Sister Bleazard notes that Relief Society is about belonging.

"It's not a club, not a class, not a cause. It's what we as women are engaged in to build the kingdom," she says. "We need to know and understand that principle and the role of Relief Society."

She explains that the new handbook not only points out the importance of welcoming new sisters into Relief Society, it also suggests that new sisters need to be trained.

"It's important that we teach new sisters about Relief Society. It's important to help them understand the rights and privileges as well," Sister Bleazard says.

Sister Burley agrees, saying, "I hope our sisters really, really gain a testimony of who they are how important they are."

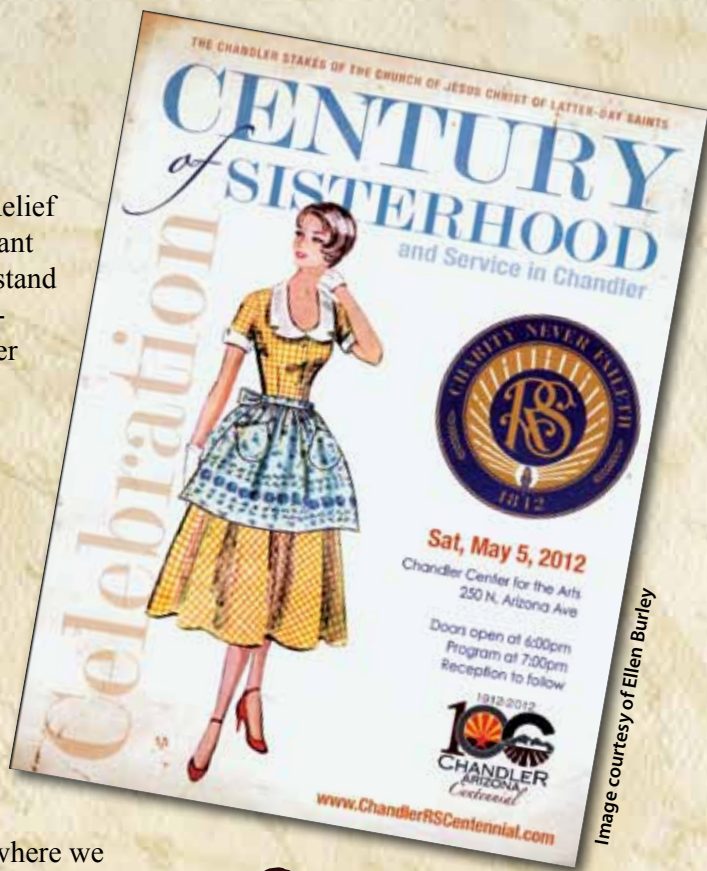

She says, "Relief Society is the foundation of our participation in the gospel. ... It's where we learn about service, caring and compassion."

In her own life, Sister Burley says, Relief Society offers her a roadmap for becoming more like the Savior.

"Relief Society has been instrumental in my growth in the gospel. From Relief Society we learn to put others first, to put what Heavenly Father wants us to do before our own needs," Sister Burley says, noting, "Every sister makes a difference to her family, her ward ... The life of one worthy sister who is trying to do what's right, can't help but have a profound effect on those around her."

Sister Beck encourages every sister to participate fully in Relief Society.

Mesa Regional Family History Center set to index 132 MILLION RECORDS in record breaking time

By Stacy Johnson
The Beehive

The Mesa Arizona Regional Family History Center (Mesa FHC) is buzzing with excitement since the April 2 release of the 1940 Census records by the National Archives and Records Administration. The Mesa FHC is supporting a joint initiative launched by Archives.com, Family Search, findmypast.com, and other leading genealogy organizations to index 132 million names and make them accessible online in the next six months.

Elder Adrian Kuzdas, a fulltime missionary serving as an assistant director at the Mesa FHC, says, "It is an ongoing effort to get it all organized and planned, but the accuracy by using Americans for American records is going to be great."

To promote the effort, the Mesa FHC recently began an online monthly newsletter and, with only six issues published, the center has over 522 contacts already in the database.

Local fulltime service missionary

Matthew Watts states that "of those contacts more than half are community groups that forward the e-mail on to their members. Who knows where they are forwarding that e-mail to? We have heard of it getting as far as London, Wales and the Ukraine."

The newsletter offers valuable information, such as the schedule of classes, which includes 60 interactive courses and 60 lectures available to the public for free. There is a section titled "Tech Tips" on how to use your computer more efficiently, a Q&A portion, and the latest news.

Another service missionary, Sister Marsha Atkin, adds that "the newsletter is an effort to let people know who we are and what we can offer. The one-on-one instruction you can get here is invaluable." To subscribe to the newsletter, send a request to mesafhc-newsletter@gmail.com.

Sister Atkin expressed her excitement about the Census indexing and, especially, of including the youth to get the job done.

"We are targeting the youth because of their skills. They learn quickly and they enjoy the friendly competitions that can be created. We are preparing an Army of Youth to help us with our task," she says.

Several youth groups have already been trained. Sister Atkin recalls, "One group from the Mesa North stake came with approximately 150 youth learning how to do indexing. It was an incredible sight. They are the future and getting them involved is vital."

Young women from the Sierra Ranch Ward in the QC East Stake learned how to index during a mutual night activity where they discovered, "There's an app for that!" Indeed, the iPhone as well as all Android phones have indexing apps, although the apps are in the beginning stages of development.

In a ripple effect designed to get as many members involved as possible, the FHC has trained each stake's family history representative, whose task was to train the ward representatives, who, in turn, train the members of their ward.

According to missionaries at the center and instructions online, setting up your home computer to do indexing can be done by following a few simple steps found on www.familysearch.org or calling your ward or stake representative. Training sessions are also available several days of the week at the center, but need to be reserved by calling 480-964-1200. Once the records become available for indexing there will be after-hours appointments to accommodate up to 160 people to work at the FHC. For additional information, please see the Mesa FHC website at www.mesafhc.org.

Two LDS Women Named Arizona's 2012 Mothers of the Year

This February, at the Arizona Association of American Mothers' Gala, two Latter-day Saint women were honored as exemplary mothers. Named Arizona's 2012 Mother of the Year was Cathy Shepherd, of the Beverly Ward, Maricopa Stake. Melissa Bawden, of the Northridge Ward, Hermosa Vista Stake, is Young Mother of the Year.

While neither is a stranger to adversity, both having lost their husbands prior to their award, both are eager to count their blessings, focusing on the joys of motherhood and of life.

Melissa, a mother of four—Reece, 12; Sarah Kate, 10; Ellie, 7; and Grant, 4—says, "Everything I do as a mother revolves around two fundamental core beliefs: First my children have my unconditional love and must always know that I am crazy in love with each of them. And second, my children must know of their Savior, of His boundless love for them and of their infinite worth."

Relying on that love herself, Melissa has chosen to face her trials with dignity and faith.

"On July 5, 2007, I unexpectedly lost my husband and my children lost their father," she says. "I had a choice, a choice to survive a terrible loss with grace or to become consumed in the grief and the 'what might have been' of my life. I knew God was with me, and I could do hard things."

At the time, her children were 7, 5 and 2 and she was pregnant with her fourth. She resolved to focus on her role as their mother.

"I had chosen to be a mother and with that came the responsibility to be strong for my children. I would be the one they could lean on and grieve with and heal with. I would be content with our life by finding joy in them and in our new ordinary."

A former first grade teacher, Sister Bawden loves singing, reading and politics and works with a Christian organization called "Loving through Literacy." She regularly volunteers at her children's school, attends Jazzercise classes and has served in a number of Church callings.

"I experienced great joy when my son, Reece, told a friend, 'I'm okay because my mom is okay,'" Melissa says. "Hard things inevitably come into all of our lives. ... Let us inspire our children to go on when they don't want to! Teach them, empower them that they, too, can do hard things."

Sister Shepherd says her seven children were raised and out of the home when she lost her husband approximately seven months ago after a long battle with cancer.

As difficult as that was, she says, "If you have faith, you know the Lord knows what is going on."

As for her Mother of the Year award, "I really don't consider myself a fabulous mother."

Instead, she believes, "Every mom deserves an award."

She says, in her own mothering, she focused on praying for her children and "trying to listen and really pay attention, not just ignoring what is going on."

Most of all, she recommends, "Love them."

Cathy adds, even in the best of homes, "Things go wrong. Don't take it personal.

That's life, and there are hard things we have to work through."

"Pray that you will know how to reach your children. Go to the temple to receive personal revelation regarding what you can do," she says.

Cathy has also incorporated music in her home. A music teacher with Mesa Public Schools and a piano teacher, she also shares through free, "mom and tot" music classes.

"In the classes we sing, and I intersperse that with parenting tips here and there," she says. She has also taught classes to seniors about how grandparents can incorporate music with their grandchildren.

"I offer these as a service and I'm trying to get the word out," Cathy explains. "I just want to share every way I can."

For details about these free classes, contact Sister Shepherd at 480-962-4759 or email playsmusic@hotmail.com.

Sister Ardeth Kapp to Speak at this Summer's Time to Blossom Young Women Conference

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

Former Young Women General President Ardeth Kapp is a recent addition to an already impressive lineup for this summer's "Time to Blossom" young women's conference to be held in Arizona May 29 through June 1.

Sister Kapp and other popular speakers, musicians and athletes—including Hank Smith, Vivian Cline, singer Alex Boye and Olympic medalist Lacey Nymeyer-John—will address the 11-to-16-year-old participants. In addition, fashion shows, a comedy night, service projects and more will create a powerful combination of fun, education and entertainment, all expertly designed to encourage young women to "blossom."

Sister Kapp led the Young Women 25 years ago, at the time the theme, values and colors still used today were first adopted. She sees her participation in Time to Blossom as yet another way to share her commitment and love for young women.

"Anytime we have an opportunity to strengthen young women and give them a sense of their identity and their purpose, we need to take it," she says. "If you save one young woman, you save generations."

At Time to Blossom, Sister Kapp hopes to help young women understand that they are of infinite worth, that each of them have angels around them to buoy them up and that they can be a powerful influence for good.

"Each young woman is beautiful and has distinct gifts and talents. We want young women to realize and love their uniqueness," say Time to Blossom co-founders Debbie Forrest and Carla Jorgensen.

For information, including participant feedback, a complete list of speakers, cost and registration details, visit timetoblossom.com.

"Mormon Moment"

Offers Opportunity to Foster Understanding

According to the Greater Phoenix Public Affairs council, events, such as the one shown above of the ground-breaking for the new Gilbert Arizona Temple, put the Church in the news and create opportunities for members to use several tools that have been created to help them answer questions about the Church.

By Cindy R. Williams & Cecily Markland
The Beehive

As Latter-day prophets have prophesied, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, more and more, is emerging out of obscurity and darkness.

"One only has to read the news to realize that is happening. Members of the Church can be found at every level of society—in business, education, government, entertainment, sports and science," says Roc Arnett, Greater Phoenix Public Affairs Council (GP-PAC) director. "This is what some in the media have referred to as the 'Mormon Moment.' So many things are happening that have brought attention to the Church. It is truly a wonderful opportunity to share something about who we are with others."

In Arizona, opportunities to share the message of Jesus Christ's restored gospel occur annually with the Easter Pageant and the Christmas lights at the Mesa Temple Gardens. The building of two new temples in the Phoenix area has also drawn increased attention to the Church in this area.

With so much attention on the Church right now, members may be asking themselves, "What is our responsibility and how should we respond to this increased interest in our Church?"

Cindy Packard, media specialist for the Greater Phoenix Area, says, "The Church has provided some great resources for us to use to help answer questions about our faith and to let the world know who we are and what we believe."

She says, specifically, "A new website called www.mormonnewsroom.org has timely and in-depth information about our faith and is a helpful resource to share with our friends and associates who want to understand us."

An example of a recently posted article on this website is called "Mormonism 101: FAQ."

"This article answers many questions people may have and helps dispel misinformation while clarifying our doctrine and practices," Sister Packard says.

She adds that Michael Otterson, head the Church's Public Affairs Department, has a regular blog, "On Faith," published by the Washington Post, which can also be found on the site. Official Church statements regarding current important issues are also available there.

Sister Packard quotes Elder L. Tom Perry, of the Quorum of the Twelve, who, speaking in the October 2011 General Conference, said, "While the Church is becoming more visible, there are still many people who do not understand it. Some have been taught to be suspicious of the Church, to operate under negative stereotypes about the Church without questioning their source and validity."

Elder Perry suggests members of the Church can do much to advance understanding of the Church. First, he says, we must be bold in our declaration of Jesus Christ. Second, we must be righteous examples to others. And third, we must speak up about the Church. He states: "We encourage people young and old, to use the Internet and the social media to reach out and share their religious beliefs."

He cautions members "Our tone, whether speaking or writing, should be respectful and civil, regardless of the response of others. We want to be honest and open and try to be clear in what we say. We want to avoid arguing or becoming defensive in any way."

Elder Perry continues, "Our lives should be examples of goodness and virtue as we try to emulate His example to the world. Good works by each of us can do credit both to the Savior and His Church."

Labor of Love & Service Saves DJ's Ranch for Family Reunions, Scout & YW Camps

Don and Jeanne Hunsaker (pictured center) enjoy time with other family members at DJ's Ranch, the camp they bought and added amenities to--and with the help of several service projects, have made it a good spot for Scout and Young Women camps, family reunions and other outdoor events.

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

In 1996, Don and Jeanne Hunsaker returned to Show Low after serving a mission in the Mexico City Temple. Within three weeks, they owned a dilapidated camp—and embarked on a very different kind of mission.

Don attended an auction near Pine-dale, Ariz.

"The auction was at Victory Heights Bible Camp, a 100-acre site owned by a Protestant ministry from Minnesota."

Unable to comply with costly government regulations, the ministry was shutting down the camp, selling off equipment and materials. "I couldn't help but wonder what was going to happen to the property," Don says. "My mind immediately started to think of the possibilities for Scouting, girls' camp, family reunions, and so forth.”

He couldn't stand to see it destroyed and rendered useless. Don believes it was inspiration from the Holy Ghost that led him to halt the auction and offer to purchase the entire property.

Their quoted sale price “was way more than I felt I could agree to,” he says. He countered with a “ridiculous offer.”

When they accepted, he called Jeanne to tell her.

“I explained my prayerful feelings, my inspiration and my feelings of joy as to the future use of the property,” Don says.

The bank approved a loan, but, Don was able to sell a portion of his business, pay the debt and cancel the loan.

“Now, tell me the Lord does not answer prayers,” Don says.

The struggle was far from over, however. Don worked hard to restore the camp and make it ready for use.

“We built a home for my divorced daughter, added a pavilion, showers, washer and dryer and two hot water heaters.”

Don constructed a fire ring, deep-pit barbeque, sand volleyball court, baseball diamond, horseshoe pits, children's play area and more.

The Pinetop-Lakeside Stake youth provided the labor to cement in a basketball court and add a second hoop.

“Everything was like we hoped it would be.” Until 2002.

“That year, Scouts from Gilbert Stake, with their leader, Lorin Hatch, completed a project to rake up the needles from throughout the camp and around the clubhouse; a very large project indeed,” Don says.

Shortly after, Flagstaff Stake Young Women camped at DJ's.

Before their stay was over, the girls had to be evacuated to escape the Rodeo–Chediski Fire.

The fire ultimately burned half the 100-acre camp. They lost their daughter's home, her car and furnishings.

“The devastation and loss of our Garden of Eden just ripped our hearts. Rebuilding felt enormous and daunting,” Don says.

Yet, soon, miracles were evident.

“The clubhouse, bathrooms and trees throughout the camp were saved because of the Gilbert Stake's project,” he says.

They rebuilt the home with a government low-interest loan. Families, Scouts and Davis Monthan Air Force Base volunteers planted 6,000 tree seedlings.

But, drought and bark beetles took their toll.

“I just lost heart and gave up,” Don says. A developer made them offer, the Hunsakers accepted and carried the loan. Three years later, they had to foreclose.

When they got the property back, the camp was in disrepair. At that time, Don was 73.

“The hope of starting over had dimmed, until I received a phone call from Lorin Hatch, asking if I remembered the Scout project that saved the ranch. Of course I did,” Brother Hunsaker says. “I was thrilled to think they would help again.”

Advisors—Brother Hatch, Brother Rogers, Keith Lavender and Chad Heslop—and Scouts—including Drayton Lavender, Justin Heslop and Spencer Robinson, who did Eagle projects—helped rebuild and repair.

For Gilbert Stake father and sons' outing, “they took trees downed by the fire and built four more seating sections in the amphitheater.”

“I cannot express our heartfelt gratitude for the unselfish service from the Gilbert Stake leaders, stake presidency, fathers and sons and hundreds of Scouts,” Don says. “The best part is that DJ's Ranch is open again to serve those Scout camps, Young Women, and family reunions.”

Mormon Tabernacle Choir's "Magical Mix" is Part of ARIZONA'S CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

By Jill B. Adair
The Beehive

In two stellar performances in front of nearly 20,000 people, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir became part of Arizona's Centennial Celebration in February.

It was fitting that the concerts—billed as a “signature event”—were just days prior to the state's birthday, Feb. 14.

Elder Tad R. Callister, of the Presidency of the Seventy, speaking to dignitaries and special guests at a VIP reception prior to the Feb. 11 performance, said that “Church history is intertwined with Arizona's.”

He noted the Mormon Battalion trek through the area in 1846-47 and Brigham Young's call beginning in 1873 to colonize the area south of the Colorado River.

Often referred to as “America's Choir,” the Mormon Tabernacle Choir became part of Arizona's centennial celebration in February.

“From this humble beginning we now have nearly 400,000 members who call Arizona home,” he said.

Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer called the concert a “fabulous evening for Arizona.”

“The choir is a magical mix of voices and music bound together by abiding faith,” she said. “We are especially blessed by this concert.”

“One voice doesn't make a choir and one pioneer doesn't make a state, but together their power and beauty grows beyond our imagination,” Gov. Brewer added. “We are deeply grateful for that wonderful blessing on behalf of the state of Arizona.”

The concerts, held Feb. 10 and 11 at US Airways Center in downtown Phoenix, featured 310 members of the choir and 65 members of the Orchestra at Temple Square, many who have connections with Arizona. Announcer Lloyd D. Newell asked any with Arizona ties to stand and about three-quarters of the choir and orchestra stood and many waved Arizona flags.

“I've never seen (the choir) as excited as they are today,” said Choir President Mac Christensen. “We are thrilled to be here.”

The two concerts to near sellout crowds featured a diverse selection in-

The choir presented “Arizona,” a beloved song with lyrics that outline some of the things people love about the state.

Two special guests conducted the final song, “This

Two Gilbert Sisters Offer Modest Prom Dresses FREE

By Cindy R. Williams
The Beehive

The Coon sisters—Brittany, 16, and Hannah, 14—are working together on a Young Women’s project to promote modesty. The sisters have collected nearly 300 modest dresses that are now available for other young women to borrow for proms and other formal occasions.

The daughters of Todd and Loreen Coons of the San Tan Stake came up with the name “Divine Design Dresses” to emphasize the Young Women’s value of Divine Nature.

“As daughters of God, we can show respect for our bodies by dressing modestly and being clean and dignified in how we act. But that doesn’t mean that we can’t look pretty,” says Brittany.

“We want to help give girls a more positive image about themselves and show that you can be beautiful and modest,” says Hannah.

“The idea came from our friends, the Fullers, from Mesa, who have been doing this for three years,” says Brittany.

The sisters accept all donated formal dresses. Their goal is to make all the dresses modest. They have modified some of the donated dresses and for those that can’t easily be altered, the girls suggest adding a shrug or jacket to make the dress modest.

“We appreciate people who are willing to give a little back by modifying a dress or, in other ways to help benefit others, even if it costs them a little money sometimes,” says Brittany.

The Coons girls announced their project at Evening in Excellence in November 2011, and quickly collected 30 dresses from people in their ward.

They next attended the Arizona Bridal Fair, where they explained their project to dress store owners and asked to be contacted if the stores had any dresses to donate. They met a woman who was discontinuing a dress line and agreed to donate the dresses. They picked up the five large boxes containing over 250 new dresses from her store in Phoenix.

To borrow dresses, the girls require a $40 fully refundable deposit and ask that dresses be dry cleaned before returning them within two weeks. They also ask that the dress be modified (if needed), and be worn modestly; and, if a shrug or other coverup is purchased, they ask that it be donated when the dress is returned.

The dresses come in many sizes, colors and shades, except white. There are about 80 semi-formal (tea-length dresses and short dresses, all at least reaching the knee. The rest are floor-length formal gowns, including full-skirted "ball gowns," mermaid-style, empire waist and others. Fabrics included satin, chiffon, taffeta and more. Some have intricate beading, sequins, tulle, sashes or other embellishments.

"It's so fun when people see the dresses for the first time. Sometimes there is a little 'gasp' because they just can't believe all the gorgeous dresses they are seeing," says Brittany.

"This project is tailored for any girl, not just LDS, who want to wear a beautiful, modest dress without spending a fortune," says Hannah.

To borrow or donate a dress, contact Brittney and Hannah at DivineDesignsDresses@yahoo.com and make an appointment to visit their home. To learn more, go to www.DivineDesignsDresses.org

Alex Boye' Launches YouTube Video of African & American Music Combo

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

Alex Boye' is known for his participation with the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, including two solo numbers on the recent CD, "Come Thou Fount," which garnered rave reviews and reached #1 in the Billboard Classical Charts. He also received widespread attention for his command performance at the Glenn Beck event in Israel, the video of which continues to attract YouTube visitors.

Now, Alex says, "I received my U.S. citizenship on February 22, 2012. I guess you could say that was the day that I 'officially' became an African American. So with this, I had the idea to take the best of American and African music and fuse them together and see what we could come out with."

In March, Alex had heard the Orem Institute of Religion Choir from Utah

Valley University.

"From their first note, all my senses were grabbed hold upon by a heavenly sound that left me breathless," he says.

After that encounter, Alex teamed with the 70-piece choir, and with their soloists Claire Glatliti, Andre Mateus and Julia Sanchez to shoot a powerful video of the song, "I Will Rise," written by Chris Tomlin, Louie Giglio, Jesse Reeves and Matt Maher.

The resulting video and combination of African and American music, Alex says, "exceeded all my expectations."

Alex invites all to visit YouTube to see this video (http://youtu.be/_FQb-cVwbKE). "Please comment, download the free song, then share like crazy," Alex asks.

Twenty-five mile walk reminds YW to prepare for the temple

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

Young women, their mothers and leaders from the Phoenix Stake recently participated in a 25-mile walk from the Phoenix Stake Center to the construction site of the Phoenix Temple.

"The temple is in the beginning stages of being built. The foundations are being laid and within a few months, in 2013 or 2014, it will be ready," says Stake Young Women President, Violeta Sandoval. "With the walk, we wanted to remind girls of the importance of being prepared to enter the temple."

With the theme, "More Fit for the Kingdom," leaders hoped to convey to the girls that they needed to strive to not just be fit to walk, but fit to enter the temple.

"We began about three months prior to encourage the young women and their mothers to get ready," Sister Sandoval says. Then, a month before, "We handed them a calendar, a spiritual calendar, with little things they could do every day to prepare spiritually."

Young women from all 11 wards in the stake participated, with approximately 140 young women and 70 or so mothers and leaders who walked from the stake center on Encanto, through Phoenix and Glendale and to the rocky hills of Thunderbird Mountain Preserve.

"Then, the temple is just over that," Sister Sandoval says.

Esther Galvis, of the Aguila Ward, participated with her daughter.

"I really saw the change from the beginning of the walk to the end. By the end they were helping each other, girls were carrying each other, daughters were helping moms, moms were helping daughters," she says. "It was very spiritual, a very touching experience."

Her daughter, Stephanie Galvis, 14, is a Mia Maid and a student at Gateway Early College High School.

"To be honest, I didn't really prepare at all. I thought 25 miles wasn't that far, and we were only going to be walking, so I didn't really worry about it," Stephanie says.

The day of the walk, she and a friend walked together, talked about when they needed to take breaks, shared water and encouraged each other.

"By far the hardest part was the last five miles and the walk up the mountain," Stephanie says. "There was no place to stop and no cars could come get us there. Our feet hurt and we were tired and dehydrated."

Stephanie finally heard the leaders say, "You're finished, you're done."

"All we had to do was just walk across the street to the temple. It felt like such an accomplishment."

Stephanie's parents have always believed in her and encouraged her to be ready to go to the temple someday. The walk reminded her, however, "To make it, you have to prepare. You can't just do it on the spur of the moment. You need to make corrections, decide what path to take now."

At the end of their trek, the group visited the temple construction site and were shown pictures of temples. The young women received a block inscribed with, "I'll be there someday."

Stephanie says, "I will make it. I will get there."

Missionary Moms

Meet to Exchange Tips & Testimonies

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

With 28 fulltime missionaries serving from the same ward, the missionary moms from Cooley Park Ward, Citrus Heights Stake, have countless missionary moments to share. To ensure ample time for swapping stories and support, these missionary mothers meet once a month for lunch. “I feel a common bond with the other mothers as we visit about our children and the experiences they are having,” says Shauna Hansen, whose son, Neal, left February 15 for the Arkansas Little Rock Mission. “It is great to have my son be a part of this awesome missionary force from our ward, and to see how it has affected our entire ward with a stronger desire to share the gospel ourselves here at home.”

Heather Sandstrom, mother of Elder Walker Taft Sandstrom, serving in the El Salvador San Salvador Mission, says, “It is wonderful to meet with our missionary moms each month. There is a great power and strength in these faithful women.” “It is wonderful to share ideas to help our missionaries, encourage each other if they’re ever feeling down, pray for each other and truly love each other,” she says. Deena Heap, mother of Elder James Bradley Heap, serving in the Thailand Bangkok Mission says, “A unity exists among us as we love and support one another during this special time in our lives.”

One of her favorite things is exchanging letters. “Many of our children grew up best friends together and, of course, we are always anxious to hear of their successes and experiences. We each bring a recent printed email/letter from our missionary to share and send to other missionaries. Before sending these to our son, our family loves reading them to keep updated on each young missionary.” “Missionary moms luncheons

Mesa Founder Memorialized with New Gravestone

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

The rain that fell at the Mesa Cemetery on the afternoon of February 14 did little to dampen the spirits of the 100 descendants of Francis Martin Pomeroy and other onlookers, who were gathered there for a special meeting and unveiling.

Revealed was a new headstone and memorial to the Arizona pioneer, one of the four original founders of Mesa.

"The idea came up some time ago. My brother and I felt that the grave of my great grandfather, Francis Martin Pomeroy, should have something more than just a small marker and that he should be identified as a founder of Mesa," says Pat Pomeroy, of the Aspen Ward, Kimball East Stake.

The effort was spearheaded by the two brothers—Pat, a lifelong Mesa resident, former city council member and educator and Wayne Pomeroy, former Mesa mayor and owner of Pomeroy's Mens Stores in downtown Mesa.

"We held a fundraiser and worked just within our own family to raise the money," Pat says.

As a result, the Mesa Cemetery now houses a new headstone marking the grave of Francis Martin Pomeroy as well as those of the two of his three wives buried there.

"Francis Martin Pomeroy has an interesting history," Pat says. "He was actually instrumental in founding three different communities."

Those included Salt Lake City, as Pomeroy, with Brigham Young was one of the 143 men, three women and two children in the vanguard party that entered the Valley first. As the story goes, at age 23, Pomeroy was a large, powerful man, possessing unusual physical stamina and strength. "Brigham Young knew he could be a great help as the Saints crossed the plains, especially at the 30 some rivers they had to cross," writes historian

Linda Whiting.

Pomeroy had joined the Church a few years prior to that and had married Irene Haskells. The couple migrated to Nauvoo with the early Saints and were sealed in the Nauvoo Temple February 6, 1846, two days before it was closed. In 1853, he took a second wife, Sarah Matilda Colburn; and, in 1857, Jessamine Elizabeth Routledge, became his third wife. Irene passed away in 1860.

Pomeroy went on to help establish Paris, Idaho, and then was one of the four—with Charles Crismon, Charles Robson, and George W. Sirrine—to settle the Mesa area on February 14, 1878.

Pomeroy died just four years after settling in Mesa.

are such a blessing," says Kimberly Riches, mother of Elder Quinton Riches, serving in the Taiwan Taipei Mission. "We share ideas and tips, ask advice and find answers to questions."

Most of all, the luncheons give these moms another opportunity to count the blessings that come from having a missionary in the field.

"One blessing is the peace and harmony that is felt in the home and the spirit that trickles down of service. Having a missionary preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ tends to make our family more aware of being examples and missionaries to those around us here at home," says

"Having a missionary serving has brought our family closer together, knowing how much our missionary is sacrificing to serve the Lord," Sister Riches says.

Judi Rush, whose son, Elder Michael Rush, is serving in the Kingston Jamaica Mission, says, "There is a wonderful peaceful spirit that comes into our home when we have a missionary out. This is our fourth son to serve. It seems like we can put our priorities in order, which somehow makes our lives more peaceful."

On his way to Jamaica in March, Elder Rush was stuck in the Dallas airport because of the tornadoes.

"Normally, as a worrisome mother,

I would be stressing out over this. But I've been blessed with peace knowing he is in the Lord's hands, and he will protect my son."

Sister Sandstrom appreciates seeing her missionary son's growth.

"When they have learned the principles of obedience in keeping the mission rules, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the principles of hard work and the power of prayer, it is remarkable to see their happiness."

Sister Hansen says, "I absolutely love seeing how my son has grown spiritually by reading his letters. His strong desire to share the message of hope to those who are sad and suffering and don't know where to turn makes him the happiest he has ever been."

new gravestone is larger and stands erect. It has a logo of a wagon train, Francis Wayne Pomeroy's name, birth and death dates, the names of his three wives and the date and names of the founders of Mesa.

Pat invites all, especially family members, to visit the gravesite, located just inside the front gate and to the left at the Mesa Cemetery.

"We're pretty excited about it," says Pat. "It came about as a total case of turning the hearts of the children to their fathers. It was a way to remember them, memorialize them and give them the appreciation we should."

Pudd'nhead to Parent: One Man's Journey Helps Other Parents of Children with ADD

Courtesy Sterling Pratt

From author Sterling Pratt, Pudd'nhead Parenting gives success tips for parents dealing with children with ADD, including the important foundation of how to form a strong working relationship.

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

He's been there. He was called "Pudd'nhead" as a child. And, that's just how he felt. Then, as a parent, he had children who, like him, grappled with ADD. He'd struggled, he'd agonized, he wanted more than once to throw in the towel, but, somehow, he also hit upon the very things that would allow him to succeed, in spite of ADD. Now, Sterling Pratt, of the Vista Peaks Ward, Alta Mesa Stake, shares those insights and clues with other parents and educators in Pudd'nhead Parenting: Forming a Positive Working Relationship with Child with ADD (Morgan James Publishing, $17.95). He writes: "My struggles growing up with ADD make it easy for me to understand and empathize with what your child is experiencing each day. My struggles as a parent of children with ADD make it easy for me to empathize with your daily frustration and your concerns for the future." The key, he says, to reaching a child with ADD and truly making a difference is to focus on the relationship with that child and on the child's self-esteem. "There is a lot of good advice out there, but unless the relationship is there, and the child's self-esteem is there, all the advice in the world can't help." Pudd'nhead Parenting focuses on teaching the parent how to do the right thing, "the things that will form that relationship." To begin, he says, "Parents need to get their own mindset straight about what ADD is so they can accept their child's disability." "When parents understand where the child's behavior is coming from, they can deal with the child without the judgment. ... Then, once that relationship starts to form, there are ways parents can help a child rebuild self-esteem." Throughout the book, the author encourages parents to not only refrain from judging their children, but to be easy on themselves as well. "No one is a perfect parent. ... We learn, progress and move forward." Brother Pratt says, while they may not be readily recognized as such,

From his own experience with ADD as well as from parenting children with ADD, Sterling Pratt has provided helps for other parents in his new book, Pudd'nhead Parenting.

gospel principles are laced through the book. "The gospel does help solve a lot of things." He says his own lifeline was the gospel. "When a kid has learned bad ways to cope, it's tough going into their teenage years. But, I had grown up with the gospel, and, like they say, 'strings attached will pull back.' At 15, I studied and prayed to know if the Book of Mormon was true and got clear an-

Young Woman Takes Personal Progress Up a Notch

By Jill Adair
The Beehive

At age 13, Courtney Cotter chose a project for Young Women Personal Progress that she thought would help get her one step closer to earning her Young Women's medallion. What it did, in fact, was change the course of her life.

"I played the piano by ear since I was about three years old," she says. "So I thought, how about I try writing a song?"

She explored her thoughts on "faith," sought inspiration from the scriptures and, in one night, wrote a song called "By My Side."

Since then, Courtney—who is now 20 and is a member of the Mesa Kimball East Stake—has written more than a hundred songs. Plus, she is working on her third CD and enjoys performing her original work.

While she believes that she would have eventually turned to writing songs, she credits the Personal Progress program for pushing her to have that first opportunity early on in her life.

"Personal Progress gives you opportunities to grow," she says. "At that age I didn't really have the maturity to write songs, but I decided to sit down and try it."

"If you take your talents and use them for good, you will be blessed," Courtney adds.

Her mother, Judy, agrees.

"[Personal Progress] took her in that direction," Judy says, noting that, as a young woman spends at least 10 hours with a value, she can find within herself who she is. Heavenly Father will say, "Yes, you are a songwriter," or "Yes, you can do this or that."

She's seen her daughter grow in her songwriting abilities as well as developing her singing.

"It's been a process," she says. "She's learned to sit down and take the time to develop it into a talent."

Courtney points out, "I never considered myself a singer, but since I write songs, I sing them."

"My inspiration for writing is to make people happy," she says. "I feel that my music can be my instrument in God's hand."

She produced her first CD in 2010, during her senior year at Mesa High School. Her album, "My Happy," features some of her favorite songs. She calls it "Indie/pop/folk and jazz mixed."

Her second album, "Home I Roam," released last year, has a little less jazz.

Courtney has been amongst the top finalists in several songwriting contests where she performed in California and Colorado, was awarded a summer scholarship at Berklee School of Music in Boston and won 99.9 KEZ radio station's Christmas contest in 2010 with a song about Santa and Christ.

She is pursuing an Audio Production degree at Mesa Community College and plans to continue her studies at Musician's Institute in Los Angeles.

For upcoming performances or to hear samples of Courtney's music, visit CourtneyCotterMusic.com.

swers about that and I started to go in a more positive direction."

It wasn't until he was married and had a child diagnosed with ADD that he understood his own condition.

"That's when I found out what was going on with me," he says. "I totally flunked out of first grade, was kicked out of BYU and struggled to find a career. Now I understand why."

Brother Pratt appreciates the opportunity he has had to parent children with ADD.

"I've had an opportunity to parent myself through them. It's been a great experience."

He encourages parents, saying, "Find things your kids are good at. Seek out your kids' strengths. Help them go in the direction they are supposed to be going in life."

Visit www.ADDparentingsupport.com to learn more about Pudd'nhead Parenting, read Brother Pratt's blog, or access a free download of the video tutorial, "Quieting the Critic." Books are available on the website or on Amazon.com.

When it has to be Perfect!

Charles Alfred Boyle Leaves Legacy in Arizona

By Emily Jex
The Beehive

When it comes to our ancestors, unearthing the clues that would compile a complete history isn't always easy. The good thing in today's world is that, even if our ancestors didn't leave a lot of information behind, it's possible to gather information from such things photographs and other resources and historical documents, like Census records, which are easily accessible online through sites like familysearch.org.

Take Charles Alfred "Charley" Boyle, for example. As the son of Henry Green Boyle, a prominent figure in the history of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Charley's life could be easily overlooked.

One, taken in Chicago, Illinois, in the early 1900s, shows two young ladies sitting in an old car beside Charley, all well-coiffed.

Charley's father had kept a detailed record, writing of his birth in Virginia to his later years in the Southeastern Arizona. He participated in the longest infantry march in U.S. history, helped settle parts of California, Utah and Arizona. Despite the lack of such personal writings, what can be pieced together shows that Charley left his footprints in Arizona, known, among other things, for opening his own barbershop in the early 1900s in the Gila Valley.

Charley was born in Payson, Utah, on a spring day in 1875, to Henry Boyle and Arabella McKinley. When he was 12, his father was imprisoned on charges of practicing plural marriage in Utah.

In 1889, when Charles was nearly 15 years old, the Boyle family moved to Arizona, traveling by train to Co-chise, and by wagon to the Gila Valley. The Boyle family raised bees and harvested honey which they sold in the area. Charley's father became Pima postmaster and the hill near their home was known as the Boyle Hill.

Around 1900, Charles worked as a teamster in Globe, Arizona. He was 25 at the time and still single. Around the time of his father's death in 1902, a photograph was taken of Charley with other men who worked in a lumber camp on Mt. Graham.

On February 16, 1910, in Solomonville, Arizona, Charles married Sarah Bathsheba Luster, daughter of Samuel and Bathsheba T. Luster from Sanford, Colorado. The newlyweds lived with Charles' mother, Belle Boyle and Charley's younger brothers in Pima. The 1910 U.S. Census shows that Charley owned his own barbershop; his brothers, Heber and Orie, worked in the mining industry; and Lester worked as a cowboy on the family ranch.

Tragically, Sarah contracted typhoid and died June 21, 1910, just four months after their wedding. Later, Charles met Alva Eudora McGuire Johnson, the young widow of Horace Lorenzo Johnson, Jr. They became friends and were married in 1914. His three stepdaughters—Marva, Ione, and Lora—loved him for his sense of humor and patience.

Charley listed his occupation as barber working on his own account on the 1910 and 1920 census. The Boyle family lived near Alva's parents, J.J. McGuire and Ellen Kilby. A young banker by the name of Spencer W. Kimball, future president of the Church, also lived a few houses away.

The Great Depression forced the Boyle family to move around to find work. They traveled to Phoenix, Los Angeles, Calif., and to Fort Grant on the other side of Mt. Graham. In 1930, Charley worked as a guard at Fort Grant Boy's Reform School. His son, Ken, enjoyed catching runaways with the hounds and finding military left-overs on the old fort site.

Charles Boyle died in 1944, at nearly 69 years old.

Temple Construction Continues

Construction on the Phoenix Arizona Temple and the Gilbert Arizona Temple continues, with changes visible almost daily.

According to an unofficial website, "as of March 2012, the basement walls of the Phoenix Arizona Temple are in place and steel girders are being erected for framing the main level."

The Phoenix Temple will sit on a parcel of approximately five acres, adjacent to an existing meetinghouse at the intersection of Pinnacle Peak Road and 51st Avenue. The temple is a single-story building, with a full basement and a footprint of 27,423 square feet.

Progress is also being made on the construction of the 83,000-square-foot Gilbert Arizona Temple, located at the southeast corner of Greenfield and Pecos roads. As of March 2012, most of the exterior precast concrete panels had been attached and the spire cap had been installed.

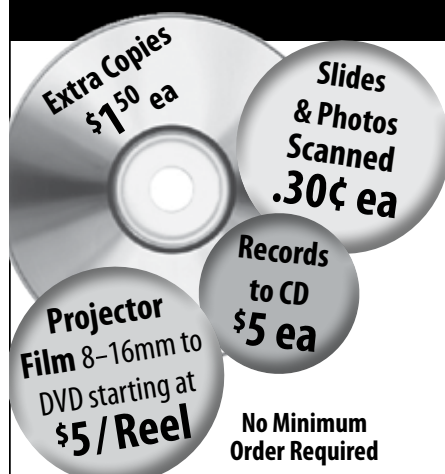

A visitors' trailer welcomes visitors at both temple construction sites. Temple construction can be observed and, in addition, the trailers are manned by couple missionaries, who will answer questions about the temple and present photographs and materials.

Author says preparation is key to surviving the coming financial collapse

Author William R. Bill Cunningham, of Mesa, shares powerful insights about the state of economy and the inevitable collapse that lies ahead, then gives tips for what can be done to prepare in his new book, Money, Deceit and Your Future.

While the recently released book, Money, Deceit and Your Future, offers a "reality check" and a warning about the financial collapse ahead, it also gives a positive plan of action to prepare for the future.

father and grandfather.

He started writing about the economy with a primary goal of warning his own family. Now, he shares his message with as many as will listen, through workshops and presentations and through his recently published book, Money, Deceit and Your Future.

"Initially, it was just to bring attention to my family and those

I cared about and to let them know what's coming," Bill says.

The more he researched and watched the signs, the more he knew his message needed to be heard by a wider audience.

"Our country is facing a financial crisis, and so many people are clueless to what is happening. There is a necessity for people to understand why it's happening and to get prepared," he says.

Bill explains, "There is no way the U.S. government can sustain the debts they are incurring and the continued spending."

He says that, with the election year, "It becomes a 'feel good' year, and a lot of money will be floating around," pumped into the economy to create a sense of well-being.

Some experts predict that, by January 1, 2013, "the country will be on the precipice of going over a financial cliff," Bill says.

He adds that what is happening with the economy is "hiding in plain sight."

"Money, Deceit and Your Future makes it understandable in a concise way. It helps us see the reason why things with our economy are the way they are and, most of all, what we can do to get prepared."

While he believes a financial collapse is imminent, Brother Cunningham says there is much that individuals and families can do.

"Preparation is imperative," he says. "There is still time, but not much time."

He adds that financial preparation is part of what prophets have encour-

New Book Teaches Young People the Principles that Made our Nation GREAT

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

With cleverly written and illustrated books, he's known for introducing young people to heroes in the Book of Mormon.

Now, with his latest work, David Bowman, of Snowflake 9th Ward, Snowflake Stake, is making champions of the signers of the Constitution and helping young people understand the importance of this document.

His ninth published book, What Would the Founding Fathers Think?: A Young Americans Guide to Understanding What Makes Our Nation

Author and illustrator David Bowman targets young people with his new publication, an expertly illustrated book about the Constitution, called What Would the Founding Fathers Think?: A Young Americans Guide to Understanding What Makes Our Nation Great... AND... How We've Strayed.

Great... AND... How We've Strayed, released by Cedar Fort the first part of May, teaches crucial lessons, Brother Bowman says.

"There is a huge need for effective, engaging resources that teach young people what America is truly all about," he says. "Kids don't just innately acquire that knowledge. The principles of liberty that are at the founding of this great nation need to be infused into them long before they reach 'voting age.'"

He says, while his new book explains the intent of the Founding Fathers, it also points out where we have gone astray.

"Preteens and teens need to understand how incredibly off the mark our nation is today," Brother Bowman says. "The United States of America, as a whole, is not living true to those founding principles."

Brother Bowman says his experience in writing "What Would the Founding Fathers Think?" was similar to writing the "Who's Your Hero" series.

That series began when, as a long-time seminary teacher and father of young children, Brother Bowman says he found, "There was nothing out there that was fun and that applied the scriptures to kids."

He combined his love of the scriptures, his tact for teaching young people and his artistic abilities, to create six "Hero" books, and followed those with The Great Plan of Happiness and a book for teens titled Don't be a Lemuel. He is also well known for his fine art illustrations depicting Jesus Christ.

Brother Bowman, who teaches Especially for Youth classes in the summer, says, to reach young people, "I get them laughing, smiling. Once they are engaged, they learn. You have to use humor, make it fun"

Rhyme and Reason

Backrubs Don't Belong In Church

Mormon culture is a grand thing, except when it's not. There is one practice among ward members that needs to be returned to the privacy of our homes or to a trusted massage parlor.

Though it may seem that I'm picking at nits, I think not. The issue of Sacrament meeting backrubs is about respect for our speakers, our fellow ward members and chapel reverence.

Once before, I listed a litany of "better ways to conduct oneself within ward meetings," including: Discard chewing gum when giving a talk or teaching a lesson. In fact, any form of chewing while sitting or performing on the stand is clearly distracting. However, what seems to be an epidemic is chapel backrubs. I'm compelled to revisit that last topic, again.

Out of state recently, I discovered backrubs in LDS meetings must be a national, if not universal behavior. To find it in Zion was especially rattling. I observed a mother massaging her daughter's back in the Tabernacle. Yes, during an Ensign Stake Conference in Salt Lake City this past March, my friend and I sat next to a mother who massaged her daughter's back for the entire service. The daughter appeared to be 16 or 17 years old. She had long hair, which she flung over her head so her mother could also reach her neck as the therapy continued throughout the entire meeting. The massage was impressively thorough, not the usual tickling or light rubs we generally see. Meanwhile, the daughter was playing games on her iTouch, held between her knees.

The father sat on the other side, oblivious. What was surprising was this family was beautifully dressed and coiffured, thus one would suspect it might have a certain sophistication.

Before you think that was just an anomaly, two rows ahead of us were young couples, a pair on each end of the pew, doing the usual light rubs, taking turns, off and on through the two-hour meeting. This behavior can be seen in nearly all wards at one time or another.

Who doesn't appreciate affection between loved ones, and a sense of camaraderie when family is all together in a place of worship, away from the stresses of home and personality struggles? But brothers and sisters, really? In the Chapel? During Sacrament meetings? Are we oblivious to decorum and the distraction we present to those behind us and on the stand?

As hard as my friend, who was sitting right next to the mother, and I tried to focus on a marvelous program in the Tabernacle that day, we were so distracted, it was painful. Our every effort of concentration on the speakers, of extending charity and forgiveness, understanding, ignoring, you name it, thoroughly failed.

Do we really need a manual equal to "For the Strength of Youth" on behavior in the chapel beyond no cell phones, running, yelling or hitting? Oh, I hope not. Why not post this on your ward bulletin board?

aged Latter-day Saints to do over the years.

"Things are going to get challenging in the future and this financial collapse is one of the challenges we are likely going to face," Brother Cunningham says.

Steve and Denna Ray, of Mesa, say Brother Cunningham's book gave them a needed wakeup call, while instilling hope and confidence for the future.

"This book gave us a reality check on the seriousness of what is happening to our economy and why we are where we are. What we appreciated the most is the positive plan of action the book recommended for each individual to be better prepared for the future. It left us feeling encouraged that we can do something about it," the Rays say.

The book offers "the right approach to what to do in our current upside down economy," Brother Cunningham says.

Money, Deceit and Your Future (Inglestone Publishing, $12.95) is available online at www.MoneyDeceitandYourFuture.com, on Amazon.com and in LDS bookstores. Mesa Author Wins Whitney Award Nomination and Contract to Publish Second Book

By Cindy R. Williams
The Beehive

Mesa author, Theresa Sneed received a prestigious Whitney Award nomination for her first published book, No Angel; and the sequel, From Heaven to Earth, is scheduled for release this month.

The Whitney Awards, sponsored by LDStorymakers, are named after the early Mormon Apostle, Orson Whitney, who prophesized that Latter-day Saints would one day have Miltons and Shakespeares of our own.

In No Angel, Theresa takes a unique perspective—a look into the spirit world that surrounds us and how we interact with it.

The mother of six and grandmother of four, says, “Some pretty spiritual experiences inspired me to write No Angel. I wanted to write a book that put the pre-mortal existence as a backdrop, because when I was investigating the Church, it was the one thing that I had never imagined in all of my 19 years of life—and it made total sense to me. I figure if I didn’t know it existed—that I came from heaven, there are probably a lot of people who do not know that profound, yet simple, truth.”

No Angel is a story about Jonathan Stewart, who didn’t like earth in the first place and doesn’t want to go back, but has to, because Celeste Knight chooses him as her guardian angel on earth—a place he only wants to forget.

Sister Sneed, of the Northpoint Ward, Citrus Heights Stake, says, “My favorite character in No Angel is Jonathan. He’s an angel with an attitude—a bad attitude. I had so much fun developing his personality. He is a character that you won’t like very much at first, but, by the end of the book, you’ll love him.”

“Readers of No Angel use strong phrases like, ‘tears of joy,’ ‘laugh, cry and wonder,’ ‘cheer,’ and ‘brought me to tears and left me feeling so good about myself and life in general,’” Sister Sneed says.

She explains, “Writing is a very spiritual experience for me—quite often when I write I will listen to the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, Steven Alder’s flute and harp music, or the inspiring music of George Dyer, among others.”

Sister Sneed adds, “I believe that I am supposed to write—that it is a gift from God, and He would have me develop and make use of it. All of our talents are meant to bless others much more than ourselves, and I’m grateful for the talent to write—I take that stewardship very seriously.”

Much of her inspiration for writing comes from her own life.

“I am inspired by my friends and family and my 20-year association with ANWA, an LDS woman writers’ organization founded right here in Arizona, which has now expanded across the nation and into other nations.”

No Angel is available in paperback and Kindle versions. It and From Heaven to Earth are available at Deseret Book, Latter-Day Cottage, Barnes & Noble and Amazon.com. Books and more information also available on www.theresasneed.com.

Are You Deep in Debt Not Sure What to Do?

Discover The Top 10 Questions Asked When Considering Bankruptcy

First, let me say that being in debt is no fun. It’s stressful and causes all sorts of problems. If you are in debt I feel for you. Nobody thinks that they will end up in a position where they have to consider bankruptcy, but luckily there are options for you and consideration of all your options will help you make the best decisions. Bankruptcy is hard, but in many cases can be a great option especially if you are not gaining ground on your debts, in foreclosure, or have your wages garnished. Bankruptcy is a legal right and protection that helps people deep in debt get a fresh start in life by eliminating the debt. There are quite a few misconceptions about bankruptcy and many people would never consider bankruptcy because they don’t understand it. The questions and answers I address here should help you understand a little better.

Nobody thinks that they will end up in a position where they have to consider bankruptcy.

6. Will My Spouse Have to File With Me?

Not necessarily. Arizona is a community property state, but your spouse doesn’t always have to file with you. Your attorney can help you figure it out.

7. Can I Keep Some Debts Off My Bankruptcy and Deal with Them Separately?

No. All your debts are listed in the bankruptcy.

You can choose to repay any creditor after you file. Most times if you owe a family member or friend it’s better to pay them back after you file.

8. Can I Cancel My Bankruptcy If I Change My Mind?

Maybe. You can’t dismiss a Chapter 7 or a Chapter 13 converted to a Chapter 7, but you may dismiss a Chapter 13 that was never converted to a Chapter 7.

9. Is Filing Bankruptcy a Really Long Process?

No. Not at all.

A Chapter 7 Bankruptcy can be filed within days. You will have a 341 Meeting within about 40 days of filing and everything should be done within about 4 months.

A Chapter 13 Bankruptcy will have 3-5 years of a payment plan. The initial filing and approval doesn’t take very long.

10. Does it Cost a lot to File?

Bankruptcy filing comes in three parts.

1. Attorney’s Fees (If you choose to work with an attorney) Start at $997 for most cases, but always depend on the complexity of the case.
2. Credit Counseling Course. Courses range as well, but generally cost less than $100
3. Filing Fee $299 for Chapter 7 and $274 for Chapter 13

Payment plans are available for attorney’s fees.

Elizabeth Humetewa, who grew up on the Hopi reservation near Tuba City, celebrated her 100th birthday this year.

Hopi Woman Celebrates 100th Birthday

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

Born January 11, 1912, Elizabeth Humetewa celebrated the turn of a century of life this past January, at a birthday party surrounded by family members and friends.

A Hopi Indian, Sister Humetewa grew up on the reservation, 75 miles north of Flagstaff, in a town called Moencopi, near Tuba City.

Her family farmed and she remembers her mother working in the fields and tending to the gardens.

"We grew corn and all kinds of vegetables, and did it all by horse and buggy," Sister Humetewa says.

She also remembers, as a child, going with her dad to herd sheep and cattle.

She developed a great love for her family, for the land and for her tribe.

"We lived in a close knit community," she says. It was a community where the children played outside together, where traditions were important and where the men carved Kachina dolls and did basket weaving.

"To this day, we still go to the reservation to attend some of the ceremonies and to go to Hopi weddings," says Vera Noble, who is one of Sister Humetewa's three children.

Sister Humetewa was introduced to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints by her cousin, who was already a member. She was drawn to the teachings of the Church.

"Most teachings relate to how the Hopis were taught, like storing food, gardening, canning and the idea of eternal families," Sister Humetewa says. She was also impressed with the fact that "stories my dad and grandpa used to tell correlated with stories from the Book of Mormon."

She joined the Church in 1953, and her husband, Eric, joined at the same time. They were later sealed in the Mesa Arizona Temple. He passed away in 1976.

Sister Humetewa was a member of the Flagstaff 2nd Ward, Flagstaff Stake, for a number of years, where she served in various callings, including Relief Society secretary and sang with the stake choir.

"She's an amazing lady," Vera says. "She's very strong; she's strong willed. That's what keeps her going."

Vera says her mother also has great wisdom.

"She's my mentor," Vera says.

Sister Humetewa now lives with Vera in Phoenix. Vera says they now have five generations living nearby, and that her mother is still very healthy.

"She never gets sick and has only been in the hospital a few times," Vera says. "She doesn't even look like she's 100."

Sister Humetewa says the secret to her living to be 100 is: "I never drank, never smoked and ate right; and I did the right things."

She recommends the same for others: "Keep moving, don't be lazy. Treat people the way you want to be treated. Honor your father and mother," she says. "I learned a lot from the Church and from my parents, too."

Again, she says, "Don't be lazy," and adds, "Help anyone that needs help. I always remember my dad talking about that, and I try to do that."

The soul would have no rainbows, if the eyes possessed no tears.

ROAD READY

New children's book, "Maybe It's a Zebra" passes on a legacy of love

By Cindy R. Williams
The Beehive

Inspired by a comment from one of her grandchildren, and including illustrations that continue the legacy of another, Kathy Atwood's first book has been a labor of love.

Kathy, a grandmother of five and member of Salt River Stake, says, Maybe It's A Zebra started with a funny comment from one of her grandchildren during a road trip to Utah.

"We saw a dead animal on the side of the road and said, 'Look, a dead animal,' my grandson simply said, 'Maybe it's a zebra.' In the mind of a child it was a perfectly reasonable thing to say. After all, in a child's mind, zebras are everywhere," Kathy says. "My grandson's remark became a family joke. From there, I started writing down all the black and white riddles," says Sister Atwood.

As Kathy wrote, another of her grandchildren contributed in a different way.

"My granddaughter, Leelyn, used her talents and imagination to create the artwork for several of the pages. She passed away before she finished, but this book shows her beautiful talents," Kathy says. "Deirdra Coppel was able to continue where Leelyn left off. I was fortunate to find an illustrator who would use her abilities and ingenuity to continue with the legacy my granddaughter left with her drawings."

Kathy says, "Maybe It's A Zebra is a riddle book, not a story. So many children's books have tons of words. I wanted to create a book that captured the minds of little children with few words and great illustrations."

"The book is fun and exciting for young and old to read the question and try to guess the answer before turning the page. The book teaches children, while giving the reader a surprise and keeping them engaged," she says.

Sister Atwood says joining American Night Writers Association (ANWA) helped her complete the book. "I joined ANWA and met several authors and illustrators and was able to find the right individuals I felt comfortable with, who all had a part in making this book a reality."

Growing up, Sister Atwood had aspirations of being a professional roller skater, not a writer. "Writing wasn't something I chose. It is more that circumstances chose me. Once I joined ANWA, I came to understand that the project I had started could be finished, and it would be a great project that I could be proud of for many years."

Kathy encourages others saying, "It has been an eight-year journey; never give up."

She has plans to complete another book by the end of 2012 or early 2013. "The book is about my childhood and will be written for children. I want to detail what I was required to do on Saturday and help inspire children to help around the house. Hopefully we can get a few of them doing some chores rather than being glued to the TV."

Maybe It's A Zebra recently won an award in the 2012 "BOB," Beginning of Book, ANWA Writers contest.

IN THE MOMMY ZONE...

By Kristie Young Fairbanks

A few weeks ago, we made the fateful decision to paint the inside of our home. We had been procrastinating this feat for years and the timing was finally right.

Little did I know the whole process would be so time consuming and all encompassing.

Who knew that even the preparation before the painting phenomenon was such an arduous and meticulous process? Who knew there were about 20-something various shades of the color white?

We started in the living room and hauled out every piece of furniture. My husband and I worked side by side. I pointed out each drywall crack, defect, and nail puncture, while he slathered each with pink putty, miraculously erasing years of gymnastic cartwheel tumbles, karate kicks, and accidental crashes that left assorted fractures and flaws that marred our walls over the past 10 years. I was quite pleased with the progress, until the drywall sanding began.

As the room transformed, I found myself fighting a never-ending battle with the drywall dust that spewed from the sander. Thick layers of the chalky film blanketed the floors on a daily basis. I meticulously swept and mopped over the same areas several times a day, but to no avail.

The menacing demonic dust endlessly seeped into every crevice and every corner of my living room. The sinister layers magically appeared out of nowhere, taunting me into declaration of war. I waged battle upon the heinous film in what seemed like an hourly duel to its untimely death.

It was exasperating each time I spied chalky, child-sized footprints streaking across the floor after a meticulous cleaning. I became increasingly aggravated when someone would turn on the ceiling fan and the dry-wall sputum would spew into the air, somehow multiplying voraciously and vicariously before it came to rest in a dire plague, coating the entire room.

This atrocious phenomenon then began to spread its maniacal tentacles into the kitchen and bedrooms, slyly slinking about when my back was turned. I was religiously vigilant in my cleaning rituals and sweeping duties, yet this insidious enemy continuously dared to invade my beloved sanctuary.

I finally stooped to sheer aggressive hostility when our black cat turned a shade lighter after having coiled in the soft soot. So, I started my "spring cleaning" ritual a bit early. I was determined to devil dust decontamination and traveled from room to room on a seek and destroy mission.

That extermination exercise taught me a great life lesson. It takes vigilance, determination, and dedication to battle "dust devils," those sneaky and pervasive ills and difficulties of life that can coat our beings with a threatening film.

We must be diligent in our quest for decontamination. The sneaky debris will try to penetrate every nook and cranny of our soul, desperately trying to smother our well being and choke our happiness. But if we declare war with brooms poised, vowing to fight this daily infestation, we can exterminate the chalky residue into oblivion and raise our mops in victory.

My three-year-old daughter accidentally found the wellspring source where our drywall dust demon had been regenerating, lying in subtle wait in its secret lair under the drop-clothed piano, ominously poised for future attacks on unsuspecting victims.

I had to laugh as her strawberry-blond head poked out from beneath the drop-cloth, entirely cloaked with the blanched soot.

With a final flick of my broom, I ended it all. I had fought a good fight, ultimately prevailing over that fiendish dust devil. I can now retire my broom, triumphantly! But wait, my husband asks, don't we have more rooms to paint?

"And," he says, "pictures are huge to capture attention."

The author has employed all of these elements to drive home the importance of a rising generation that will take hold of the principles upon which this country was founded.

"What Would the Founding Fathers Think? accomplishes this task in a fun, visual, creative way—which is a must when trying to reach young people. It's got to be enjoyable, something they want to pick up and read," Brother Bowman says.

In the book, the author employs a chat-room style dialogue to show Benjamin Franklin inventing a time machine that enables him to take fellow founders George Washington and James Madison into the 21st Century to see what has become of their United States "experiment." The founders clearly explain their vision for the United States and the wisdom of returning to the nation's roots.

"If there is a work out there that will help our young people understand why America is great, where we have gone wrong, and how we can restore liberty, What Would the Founding Fathers Think? is it," says Shane Krauser, Director of the American Academy for Constitutional Education. He describes it as, "Exciting, funny, inspiring, moving, American! Our founding fathers would be proud."

Brother Bowman looks forward to sharing his new book and would welcome additional opportunities to speak at firesides or youth conferences.

"Our nation is only as good as its next generation," he says. "Let's equip them with the knowledge necessary to 'be permanently a free people.'"

Legacy Funeral Home

Adds Grief Counseling to Their List of Services

By Stacy Johnson
The Beehive

Relatively new to the East Valley, having opened in October 2011, Legacy Funeral Home is already becoming known for its quality services and affordable prices.

The spacious facility, located on the southwest corner of Knox and Arizona avenues in Chandler, has a peaceful, elegantly decorated interior and offers a chapel capable of serving very large groups.

The owners—David Allen, of the Maplewood Ward, San Tan Stake, and his brother, Todd Allen, of the Meadows Ward, Boulder Creek Stake—have over 20 years of combined experience in the industry.

Legacy Funeral Home is a service oriented and committed to helping families ease the financial burden that often accompanies an already-emotionally burdened event.

David stresses, “We strive to have affordable prices with phenomenal service. Even when money is tight, families want the best when it comes to saying goodbye to their loved one.”

Misty Polanco, of the Poinsettia

Ward, Mesa South Stake, recently used Legacy for her father’s funeral. She says everything was nicely done, especially in the care they took to “make my dad look as though he was just sleeping. My brother and sisters had not seen him after he died so [Legacy] worked to make him look perfect,” she says.

Legacy’s attention to personal service was exemplified when the staff asked if they could wear purple to the funeral.

“We were honored that they wore purple because it is our family’s signature color. I am so grateful that our prayers were answered and we were blessed to have found such an amazing place.”

In addition to exceptional service before and during the funeral, what truly sets Legacy apart is the care they offer to families even after the funeral is over. As a part of their caring services, Legacy offers free grief counseling classes at their facility. Each

For carpet, tile, wood or any other type of flooring, Benchmark Interiors is a complete flooring specialist store, offering competitive prices, confidence and quality workmanship.

From his beautiful, easily accessible store in East Mesa, Benchmark Interiors owner Don LeSueur carries on what has been a 37-year tradition—that of working directly with customers to provide them the best possible service and direction.

“When it comes to flooring, we do some of everything, from commercial, including dental and doctors’ offices, to new construction, to working with those who are remodeling or ‘flipping’ homes as investments,” Don says.

A member of Emerald Acres Ward, Mesa South Stake, Brother LeSueur says he runs the business with his son, Russell, who does window coverings, such as shutters and blinds, as well as flooring. Working with Don and Russ, are Kevin Young and Bob Flaherty, who have been together since their 27-year stint at the Carpet Company and then at Landmark Interiors in Mesa.

“We worked together for years. Then, when Dennis Barney sold Landmark seven years ago, I opened up my own place,” Don says.

At Benchmark, customers find a unique atmosphere of friendly expertise.

“Customers like being able to work with the owner,” Brother LeSueur says. That gives them a sense of confidence, he says, as does the fact that, “We follow through with any problems

Bottom line, Brother LeSueur says, Benchmark Interiors offers customers a quality, confident buying experience.

Couple Opens Third Bridal Store Selling Modest Bridal & Formal Gowns

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

With the desire to sell modest wedding and prom dresses, Jim and Heather Butler opened Arizona's Bridal & Formal 11 years ago in Mesa.

"There wasn't anyone else doing it at the time," says Jim. "We moved to Arizona and opened the store because we saw the need."

Last year, they opened a store in St. George, Utah, and, this past December, opened Utah's largest bridal store in University Mall in Orem. The new store, called Lauren James Bridal & Formal after the names of two of their children, has 32 dressing rooms.

"All of the dresses we sell in our three stores are designed by Heather," Jim says, "and we've been thrilled by the reaction of brides and prom girls."

Many people are surprised to learn that Heather didn't go to school to become a designer. Instead, she bases her designs on what brides are telling her they want.

"I think that's given us an edge," says Heather. "I wasn't trained in one certain theme or concept. Because of that, we have flexibility."

Heather calls her role as designer a "happy accident," and it's something that gives the Butlers more control in offering modest clothing.

Jim and Heather recently returned from a design trip to China, where Heather selected fabrics and colors for her new designs. One of the top bridal factories in China told them that their designers study Heather's sketches because they so clearly explain how each dress should be made.

"It was extremely flattering to have a top wedding dress factory say this about my sketches," says Heather.

"While I didn't get formal design education, I've spent a lot of time practicing and that has really paid off."

In addition to offering modest, unique dresses, the Butlers believe a primary reason their business has blossomed is because they offer moderate prices.

Plus, "we have the largest selection of modest wedding gowns in Arizona," says Jim. "Now, we have the largest selection in Utah as well."

Their dress collection can be seen at www.laurenjamesbridal.com or www.arizonabridal.com.

Jim has recently completed his fifth

Why Have I Never Been Told This About My Fibromyalgia?

Imagine having to live with fatigue and radiating, gnawing, shooting or burning muscle, tendon and joint pain all the time. Imagine your body full of "tender points" on your neck, shoulders, chest, rib cage, lower back, thighs, knees, elbows and buttocks along with increased sensitivity to pain, heat, cold, touch and bright lights.

As if the above weren't bad enough you may have sleeplessness, irritable bowel syndrome, headaches, irritable bladder, depression and/or anxiety. Sounds terrible, doesn't it? That's what people who suffer from fibromyalgia – also known as fibromyositis, fibrositis and myofascial pain syndrome – must endure. For some, this condition is annoying; but for others, the symptoms are all but disabling.

The medical profession is at a loss when confronted with fibromyalgia. Because of the limitations of the medical approach, MDs are approaching fibromyalgia treatment using a combination of therapies: medication, physical therapy, counseling and support groups, which have had limited success.

More and more fibromyalgia sufferers are turning to the drug-free, natural chiropractic approach. Why? Because chiropractic gets results.

The role of your doctor of chiropractic is to free you from a severe form of stress found in your spine: vertebral subluxations. Subluxations are distortions of your spine and body structure that stress your brain, spinal cord, nerves, joints, ligaments, muscles, internal organs and other tissues.

When your body is free from subluxations, your self-healing ability, your "inner healer," is better able to deal with all your health problems, including fibromyalgia.

ACT NOW – for only $19 Beehive readers will receive a complete New Patient Exam, including x-rays (full value: $125).

Tell the receptionist you'd like to come in for the Special Fibromyalgia Evaluation before June 30, 2012.

Blogs share ideas for Primary Music Leaders

I know friends of mine who are Primary music leaders and they are always looking for new ideas and creative ways to teach music and songs to the young ones in their wards. They usually find others who are serving in that calling, and they share their best tried-and-proven methods and visual aids. Blogging takes that one step closer to home.

Fortunately, there are many sites that share great ideas and resources – these places are gold mines for ideas, downloadable visuals and the best of creative activities.

The blog, Divine Secrets of a Primary Chorister (divinesecretsofaprimarychorister.blogspot.com), shares primary singing time ideas, helps and clipart from "one Primary chorister to another." Fun singing activities include Cell Phone Singing, Treasure Chest and Cut off the Tie and ideas for teaching specific songs.

Primary Singing Time Ideas for Leaders (afprimarysingingtime.com).

blogspot.com) offers downloadable files for visual aids for songs such as "Happy Song," "The Golden Plates," "Listen, Listen" and "Follow the Prophet." There are also a lot of attention-getters, ideas for using The Friend magazine, nursery singing helps and how to involve the children – from the littlest Sunbeams to the oldest senior Primary children.

The Crazy Chorister (thecrazychorister.blogspot.com) posts "a plentiful plethora of Primary plans." There are cute ideas for getting the children's attention and keeping it with tips on what you need to do in preparation and presentation. Click on The Song Hospital for a music director with an M.D. and doctor attire.

Check out The Children Sing (thechildrensing.blogspot.com) for games, puzzles, movement and more than 40 musical aids including directions and photos for simple costumes, puppets and more.

Precious Primary (preciousprimary.com).

blogspot.com) is another blog chock full of ideas with photos for Primary (and nursery) singing time. Click on Seasonal for creative holiday activities and the cute, little Reverence Mouse who encourages children to be reverent.

Singing in the Rain (primarysingingintherain.blogspot.com) has lots of ideas including a recent entry about teaching children the names of the First Presidency and Twelve Apostles by singing songs related to their hobbies and tips for preparing for the Primary program later this year.

The Good Part (thatgoodpart.wordpress.com) offers up "17 Tips for a Primary Chorister" and cute printables. Look under Primary Callings.

While not a blog, Sugardoodle (www.sugardoodle.net) is a great website with oodles of ideas for teaching songs, birthdays, planning a year's calendar, choosing helpers, conducting, getting the children quiet, handbells and chimes, Primary program helps, video clips and much more. It even gives advice for keeping Primary music materials organized.

Lastly, there is a heartwarming story at www.deseretnews.com (search for Confessions of a Primary chorister). You can follow LDS Primary Chorister Ideas on Facebook for more ideas and don't forget the Church's website, www.lds.org/churchmusic for music, resources and learning materials.

Editor's Note: This column is designed to provide Beehive readers with timesaving direction and ideas for safely and easily surfing the Internet. To suggest a topic for a future column or to share an interesting website with others, e-mail: 5adair@cox.net.

New DVD explores events leading up to the Second Coming of Christ

By Cecily Markland
The Beehive

Scripture scholar, Lowell Taylor, of Gilbert, has spent more than a decade studying the prophecies about the Second Coming of Christ.

He now shares his insights in two DVD presentations titled “God and Our Future.” Part 1, released last November, examines the accounts of both John the Revelator and the prophet Daniel, who saw and described a succession of eight kings leading up to the return of Christ in glory.

Now, in a second DVD, “God and Our Future—Building Zion,” Brother Taylor builds on the information from Part 1; yet, he says, “You do not have to watch DVD Part 1 before watching Part 2.

Part 1 is about three chapters from the Book of Daniel and three from the Book of Revelation.

“It’s like opening the playbook of your opponent and seeing what they are going to be doing,” Lowell says. “God of Our Future, Part 2 is like opening the playbook of the Saints and seeing what we are going to be doing. There have been some wonderful events that have been overlooked that now come to full light.”

He says, “Part 2 shows connections and correlations from the Doctrine and Covenants. This is a must-see for LDS members. It’s very inspiring. The ending is a magnificent surprise.”

Tuesday, from 4 to 5:30 p.m., family members and friends can come and openly discuss their grief in an environment designed to offer support.

Misty says, “The grieving classes have been amazing. They have really helped us emotionally and mentally. To hear the stories of the others and be given the place to grieve and express how we feel has helped so much. We have begun to find joy where there might have been an empty hole.”

Legacy’s goal is to keep the classes small and intimate. There is a six-week rotating schedule of topics and anyone can start at any time.

David says, “There is a great amount of satisfaction that comes from lifting people up in their time of grief.”

Legacy is proud to announce the opening of their newest location in Peoria. For information on services and pricing, call the Chandler location at 480.963.6200, the Peoria location at 623.977.6666, or visit Legacy’s website at www.azlegacyfuneralhome.com.

Learning to Love Surprises

I've never been much for surprises. My children were reminded of this often when they were young. My six children were born in a span of seven years (sort of a surprise in and of itself). As you can imagine, with children that close together, there were many occasions when some of the typical childhood "surprises" were magnified. I had three children in diapers at one time, three who had chicken pox together—all on Halloween—and so forth.

But, those "fact of life" disclosures were not the kind I objected to most strongly. Instead, my abhorrence was for a different kind of bombshell, like those that led me to remind them, "Next time the teacher tells you she's going to call your mom, do me a favor and tell me first." Or, "Next time you get in a fight with the neighbor down the street, tell me before Mrs. Jones shows up at my door with a list of grievances."

Somehow, I just never liked that bucket-of-ice-water-in-the-face kind of feeling. When you are blindsided, it's hard to smile and put together a somewhat coherent comeback.

Still, I've come to see the error of my ways and I realize I actually relish many of the surprises in life. Take this year, for instance. As January approached and I contemplated life in 2012, I sensed it could easily be a difficult year. I steeled myself accordingly. After all, my dad was in a care center, on hospice care and his situation was precarious at best. Mom, who was also under my care, wasn't doing extremely well either. Worst of all, I was turning 60. It certainly wasn't a year to celebrate.

As that fateful birthday approached, one of my daughters invited me to spend Spring break weekend with her family, camping at Mt. Lemon. I agreed, thinking that, if nothing else, a weekend of sleeping on the ground and eating half-burned marshmallows would shed a little perspective and make my life as a 60-year-old caregiver look more like a picnic!

I drove to Tucson, jumped into my daughter's fully packed van and we headed to the campground, where I got one of the greatest surprises of my lifetime. We pulled up to a camp spot, where even the abandoned coolers and some bright purple streamers didn't clue me in. As I got out of the car, another of my daughters and her children came out from where they were hiding—and then another—and another—then, my daughter from Utah and my son. They were all there—and every one of my grandchildren. They had planned the entire weekend of fabulous fun, wonderful memories and a tribute quilt as a surprise—to ME!

They surprised me, yes. But, they also reminded me of what I knew all along. I am loved, I am cared for and I am extremely blessed. And, after all... isn't THAT one of the greatest surprises: Count your blessings, name them one by one, and it will surprise you what the Lord has done.

UPSIDE DOWN IN YOUR HOME BUT NEED TO MOVE? THINKING OF A SHORT SALE?

CALL US TODAY TO HEAR ABOUT OUR PROVEN SUCCESS IN MARKETING AND SELLING SHORT SALES!
(480) 600-3663

What our clients are saying...

"I recently sold my home in Gilbert and unfortunately like so many today had to go through the stressful short-sale process in order to do so. Throughout the entire process both Penny Gould and Shannon Vowles provided extremely professional and prompt service and attention to all our needs. More than that though they made my wife and I feel at ease due to their sincere desire to see us successfully through this process. Without hesitation I HIGHLY recommend them to anyone selling or buying a home in today's turbulent Arizona real estate market!" - Bill N. Gilbert, AZ

"Working with The Gould Group on my short sale was a great experience. I was very nervous going into the process but they were very helpful, and most importantly speedy in response to any questions I had! They made an already stressful situation less stressful." -M.S. Tempe, AZ

"The Gould Group deserves recognition for their dedication and hard work. Penny Gould and Shannon Vowles went well above and beyond my expectations and did an absolute fantastic job getting my house approved for a short sale and then sold. I had another realtor company who bragged that they could help me sell my home and when they faced some rejection from my mortgage company they gave up. I contacted The Gould Group, Penny & Shannon took control and worked extremely hard and for several months and got Ocwen to approve the short sale. Without The Gould Group we would not have been able to sell my home. Thank you Penny and Shannon." John W. - Surprise, AZ
